

Carol Wilder, Director of Strategic Planning, Data Center Group, Intel

TITLE

What's In-Store For Storage

ABSTRACT

The rise of the digital economy is good news for digital storage. Although our future is definitely a cloudy one, there are a number of significant trends emerging that will likely have important implications on our industry. Find out "what's in-store for storage" and how to capitalize with smarter storage system solutions.

BIOGRAPHY

Carol Wilder is the Director of Strategic Planning at Intel in the Data Center Group focusing on Systems, Segments and Software. In her current role, she leads a team that identifies, defines and drives key strategic and technological innovations in the data center. At the core of her team's work is to have a deep understanding of Intel's customer needs and wants that drive data center system differentiation. Previously, Carol worked in product management for Amazon Web Services in storage services and Amazon's Lab126 on the Echo/Alexa products, as well, as, positions at Intel in strategy from communications to mobile to artificial intelligence.